

“Seen any liberals lately...?”

Isn't it amazing how liberals always seem to "disappear" around election time? But as soon as the election's over -- "they're back" -- and government spending continues to go from bad to worse! No wonder citizens are upset!

For example, most voters will probably never hear Jim Campbell publicly discuss his strong financial support for liberal Democrats like Bill Sheffield, Steve Cowper and Tony Knowles in prior elections. In all three cases Jim Campbell contributed the maximum amount to their campaigns - and he's particularly close to Tony Knowles, serving as Knowles' deputy campaign treasurer.

In total, there's a real good chance Jim Campbell's actual political philosophy is much more liberal than he would like most voters to know at this time.

On the other hand, Tom Fink is totally different -- there isn't any doubt that he's truly conservative, with a strong independent streak.

And he's widely experienced. In addition to six years as mayor, he served eight years in the legislature, including two years as Speaker of the House. And in all that time, he's proven to be absolutely honest, independent, true to his word, and willing to be the "bad guy" when it's necessary to reduce excessive state spending.

And with Tom Fink as governor, state spending will be reduced -- guaranteed, absolutely, 100% for certain -- and that's worth voting for.
